

Inox Green Energy Services Private Limited

Conflict Of Interest

1 . PURPOSE:

Our Company, that is Inox Green Energy Services Limited together referred to herein after as the Company is committed to conducting business in a manner that ensures employees' business judgment and decision making is not influenced by undue personal interests.

When employees' personal interests either influence, have the potential to influence, or are perceived to influence their decision making in the Company, a conflict of interest situation results. This guideline explains the relevant principles and rules for preventing or managing conflicts of interest and how such principles and rules are to be implemented.

2. SCOPE AND APPLICABILITY

This guideline applies to all employees, trainees, consultants, retainers, or anyone who is directly or indirectly associated with the Company for providing goods and services, either directly or indirectly.

3. PRINCIPLES AND RULES

Conflicts of interest may arise where an anyone places his or her personal interests before the interests of The Company and where such personal interests unduly influence that persons business judgments, decisions, or actions. These situations may include both closely related persons defined below and friends. Making judgments, taking decisions, or pursuing actions when facing a conflict of interest may make it difficult to perform work for The Company objectively and effectively and may have legal and regulatory consequences.

Common examples of conflict of interest situations include personal workplace relationships (e.g., hiring or supervising a closely related person), external mandates (e.g., serving on the board of directors or scientific advisory board of a The Company competitor), outside employment (e.g., having a second job with a The Company customer, supplier, or competitor), promoting personal financial interests (e.g., owning a substantial share of a The Company supplier while in a position to steer The Company business towards it), and receiving fees, commissions, discounts, gifts, entertainment, or services (e.g., receiving cash from a The Company business partner).

"Closely related persons" are the Associate's family members, someone with whom the Associate has an intimate relationship, and those living in the same household as the Associate.

3.1 As part of their employment with the Company, employees have a contractual obligation of loyalty to The Company. Accordingly, employees shall avoid conflicts of interest with The Company. The Company respects employees' rights and choices and does not wish to interfere with their personal lives. However, employees' avoidance of conflicts of interest is an important part of maintaining the integrity and sustainability of our business and builds trust and support amongst colleagues and our key stakeholders. The Company understands that avoiding a conflict of interest may not always be possible or practical. The required action for an employee who does not or cannot avoid a conflict of interest is to disclose it.

3.2 Having a conflict of interest is not necessarily wrong. However, it can become a problem or a legal matter if an employee tries to influence the outcome of business dealings for direct or indirect personal benefit. This is why transparency, in the form of disclosure, is critical and helps to protect the integrity and reputation of The Company and the employee. A suggestive list of Conflict of Interest situation is provided in Annexure – I, which is just illustrative and not exhaustive.

4. DISCLOSURE

“Disclosure” means sharing the existence, nature, and all relevant facts of a conflict of interest with the employees Manager. Disclosure provides transparency to actual, potential, or perceived conflict of interest risks to the Company. It shall be the responsibility of all employees to disclose any conflict of interest.

5. ADDRESSING A CONFLICT OF INTEREST

“Addressing a conflict of interest” is the process of identifying and implementing strategies and practices to minimize the risks associated with the disclosed conflict of interest. One example: if an Associate’s spouse is a Senior Executive at a potential The Company supplier, the Associate’s Manager may decide the best way to mitigate potential risks to the business interests and reputation of The Company is to exclude the Associate from any role where he/she can make decisions about or influence the outcome of that supplier’s activities.

Addressing a conflict of interest is the responsibility of the Manager. The Manager shall -

- a) Treat the information disclosed by the employee with appropriate confidentiality and without bias
- b) Fairly evaluate the conflict of interest situation disclosed by the employee, including the risks to the business interests and reputation of The Company
 - c) Inform and seek guidance from Legal, HR, or the Company Secretary and address the conflict of interest so that risks to The Company are minimized and the personal interests of the employee are protected as far as possible
 - d) Communicate the decision and its reasoning to the employee and follow up to ensure the employee understands and complies with it

6. TRAINING AND AWARENESS

All employees shall familiarize themselves with this guideline and participate in periodically held training sessions. Managers shall additionally be trained on their specific responsibility to evaluate and effectively address conflicts of interest.

All employees shall have to sign a declaration as given in Annexure II as a token of their acceptance of receiving the Guideline and having understood the same, their concurrence to abide by the same. All new joiners shall also be required to sign the Annexure II and this document shall form a part of the Joining Document.
